

Enrico Cairola graduated in Political Science at the University of Turin in 1985. He holds a post-graduate degree from the Fondazione Studi e Ricerche Internazionali of Florence (1987). From 1988 until 2019 he held several positions in the UN specialised agency for labour, the International Labour Office, in Africa, in Geneva and for several years at the International Training Centre of the ILO as a Programme Manager. He published several books and articles on workers' rights, labour relations and the impact of globalisation.